Decoloniality, Indigenous Resistance, and Environmental Justice in Mother Forest: The Unfinished Story of C.K Janu

Midhun Mohan is a doctoral candidate in the Department of English at the Central University of Tamil Nadu, Thiruvavur, India. His research interests include Material and Affective Ecocriticism, Dalit-Adivasi land rights resistance, and Environmental Justice. Midhun's work focuses on the material, affective, and intersectional aspects of Dalit-Adivasi land struggles and how it exposes the lop-sided nature of the often lauded 'Kerala Model of Development'. He has presented his research at various international conferences and has published articles in several peer-reviewed journals. In addition to his academic pursuits, Midhun is actively involved in community outreach programs aimed at promoting indigenous rights and environmental justice.

'Heavy Waters' of Punjab: A Hydro-critical Analysis of Bapsi Sidhwa's Ice-Candy Man

Muhammad Ali is a lecturer in English at Government College University, Lahore. His interest areas include Partition Novel, Classic and Contemporary Pakistani Television Drama, and Environmental Literature emerging from South Asia. As a researcher, he likes to place subcontinental literary texts within frameworks rooted in the environment, such as Eco-criticism, Hydro-criticism, Geo-criticism and Critical Animal Theory. Wilfrid Laurier University, Canada, published his latest research article on the connection between geology and human identities.
